

STEP TWO: CREATOR

"A person that brings something into existence"

Holographic Reality • Self-responsibility • Manifestation • Projections • Power • Confidence • Resourceful • Architect

*"Imagination is more important than knowledge. Knowledge is limited. Imagination encircles the world" Albert Einstein

*"What we are today comes from our thoughts of yesterday, and our present thoughts build our life of tomorrow: Our life is the creation of mind." Buddha

Your thoughts, ideas and imagination create your reality
Your world is a holographic presentation of your thoughts

Richard Branson:

“I love people so I am open to meeting people all the time. On a Virgin plane I will get out and shake hands with all the passengers and talk to them. In the process you know we will get feedback, we will get ideas, the important thing is to be open, open to ideas and ideas will come to you.”

Alison Pothier:

“I had a dream that probably says it best for me. To change the world I see, I start by changing it in me”

Achievements begin as ideas growing in time, like the growth of a tree from a few feet to several meters tall

Do Thoughts create our reality?

Barbara Hubbard:

“If you see there are innate patterns in nature, the more you know about the patterns, let's say towards greater cooperation, greater synergy, greater consciousness, the more you can affirm that in yourself. And then you get encouraged to do more of what is creative.”

Richard Branson:

“It is about creating things. And it's about people and it's about making a real difference to other people's lives.”

Scilla Elworthy: if I go out for a walk where I work in the Cotswold's in England, I'm just in awe of the beauty, the mist on the river, the huge old oak trees. You know those oak trees have been there for 400 years. An acorn has a 400 year business plan. I love the wisdom of these natural forces

Does imagination help us become more creative?

By cooperating with patterns we become a powerful force for change
By stretching our imagination we can conceive greater possibilities for our lives.

Richard Branson:

"Space has been run by Governments. Governments are not interested in you or me going to space. So in 1990 I registered the name Virgin Galactic Airways, love the name. And then you know started traveling the world meeting scientists, meeting technicians to see if anybody would be capable of building a reusable space ship. Which would be the start of a whole new space era of taking you know people into space. From taking people into space, a whole lot of exciting new things could happen like intercontinental travel, you know satellite into space at a fraction of the price that it currently costs to put satellites into space, which will mean schools could maybe have their own satellite or universities will be able to afford to have their own satellites."

As you observe this creative process it brings self belief and confidence.
You understand...as you think, you create.

James Caan:

“I think it is probably very important to be able to believe in your ideas, believing in your own conviction of where you are going is fundamental. It is not a nice to have, it's critical.”

David Hamilton:

“One of the most powerful things I know about is the, where we imagine ourselves living the dream or doing the thing you wanna do or being the person you, you want to be. And incredibly your brain can't distinguish between real and imaginary. Scientific studies actually show that if you physically do something or you just imagine doing the same thing, to your brain it is exactly the same thing. So when you are imagining being this person you want to be or living that dream or having this experience in your life, to your brain, it is happening right now. In fact even more than that, it is already a memory “

Peter Fraser:

“We can influence things with our thoughts and we are influenced by other thoughts and information, we're part of a network.”

My life is up to me from this moment on.

Alison Pothier:

“So I needed to understand in that, that I actually was also creating or part of what was outside of me. And had the ability to affect it.”

Brett Moran:

“When life becomes so dark and becomes so negative I actually pictured myself going to prison so I could have this escapism from the real world so I could get away.”

Jack Canfield:

“We have a hundred percent responsibility for everything in our life and we can create anything we want.”

David Hamilton:

“It’s very important to be really aware of what you’re actually thinking about, what your aspirations and what your hopes and dreams are, but also what your daily thoughts are.. We complain about stuff. And that’s not wrong, that’s what we all do because it demonstrates how you feel. But we, we’re giving attention to the stuff that we don’t want in our life, the stuff we hate. We moan about it, we talk about it, we, we have conversations with people about the stuff we hate in our lives so we are literally feeding that. And that can have an effect on whether something like that does show up in our lives.”

Responsibility is not about looking back. It’s about looking forward and saying:
“What do you need to change in your own life?”

James Caan:

“You know they say that sometimes you exert that level of energy in your ideas and your thoughts and your beliefs of what you want to do and you kind of make it happen.”

Peter Buffet:

“If you are continually self reflective and realising you play a role in everything you do so you are constantly feeding back possibilities and, and where you want to go and where the world has met that in some way.”

Alison Pothier:

“To create abundance in this world and to come together and collaborating on creating a new world until we change the perception of what we have got available to us. We are not in a recession in anything but our minds. We have the ability to collaborate and create a very, very different outcome for ourselves if we look at it differently.”

As creators we realize we have the power to choose who we are going to be to create ourselves

Richard Branson:

“I think, as I have got older, I have realized that almost nothing is impossible if you set your mind to it.”

David Hamilton:

“I often use an analogy of a spider’s web, but a web of interconnectedness perhaps made of intelligence or information that interconnects all of the universe, all of life. You know and you think, how does a spider know when a fly is trapped in its web and it feels the vibration. So maybe in a very similar way, the entire universe vibrates to the tune of each one of our thoughts and hopes and dreams and ideas.

Vlatko Vedral:

“What emerges really from this is that the interaction between us and the rest of the universe, other people or anything else in the universe, is really a two way process. There is a mutual interaction there.”

Gregg Braden:

“So it’s in this quantum incubator of reality that all possibilities for all things we can ever imagine or think of already exist. Everything from the lightest of the light to the darkest of the dark; from our greatest joys, to our deepest fears, from our abundance of success to our failures and our disappointments. All of these things exist as possibilities. It is truly an awesome power because it suggests when many of us come together and claim a peaceful world or a healing in our bodies or the bodies of our loved ones that it's not necessarily magical or even mystical it is simply a principle of our universe that what we claim in our thoughts feelings emotions and beliefs is mirrored back to us through this feedback mechanism in the world around us and this is the power of living in a holographic universe. It's one of the things the ancients called the great secret, the great secret is to create change in our world we become the very things that we would like to experience in life. We become those things."

Your thoughts are packets of information sent outwards into the universe to match and construct your hopes and dreams

When you become the creator you open your world to infinite opportunities and possibilities through the creativity of imagination.
